Web.com to Host Small Business Summit to Help the Greater Houston Area Small Businesses Learn How to Succeed Online

Free Web Marketing Seminar to be Held at the Shell Houston Open

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 26, 2015 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Web.com (Nasdaq:WWW), a leading provider of Internet services and online marketing solutions for small businesses, will host a free Small Business Summit designed to help small business owners in the greater Houston area learn how to successfully increase their business' visibility and better market themselves online. The Small Business Summit will take place on Tuesday, March 31, 2015, from 9:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m. in the Champions Pavilion at Golf Club of Houston in Humble, Texas. Through Web.com's agreement with the PGA TOUR and as umbrella sponsor of the Web.com Tour, Web.com developed the Small Business Summit as a benefit to small business owners in communities across the country.

"Entrepreneurs and small businesses are the leaders in job creation across the greater Houston area and are the engines that drive the success of our local economy," said Steve Timms, tournament director for the Shell Houston Open. "To stay competitive in today's marketplace, it is important for small business owners to build an online presence and learn what it takes to be successful online. With the help of our corporate partners, Web.com and Bank of America, we are pleased to help local small business owners continue to prosper and grow while also having the chance to enjoy the Shell Houston Open."

Derek Pease, manager of marketing at Web.com, will lead the discussion at the Web.com Small Business Summit, and will share information and tools that small business owners can use to improve their cash flow and business performance; increase their online visibility; and optimize their online marketing efforts.

Topics and content at the Small Business Summit focus on ways small business owners can achieve a successful Internet presence, including the elements of a great website, how to determine if their website is working for them, increasing traffic to their website and business, mobile marketing and decoding how to efficiently market their business on Google, Facebook and Twitter.

"As part of our commitment to give back to the communities we serve, we are pleased to offer this event which is focused on helping small business owners improve their business model," said Pease. "Every day, Web.com helps millions of business owners address the challenges of building and maintaining an effective online presence that allows their businesses to grow. We expect a lively dialogue covering a range of key, timely topics that small business owners face when tackling this increasingly important digital opportunity."
